50% of school syllabus to be cut to promote sports

NEW DELHI: In a bid to promote sports in the country, Union Minister Rajyavardhan Rathore said on Monday that a games period will be made mandatory in schools after reducing the syllabus by 50% by next year.

“We have come to a stage where sports is not a part of education: it is education. The ministry of education is ensuring that by 2019, the syllabus in schools is reduced by 50% and to make sports more relevant.

“We are also ensuring that the SAI (Sports Authority of India) reduces its manpower by 50% by 2022 so that it can cater there will be a sports period on a regular basis,” Rathore said.

Rathore said the ministry is planning several things to sports and it has a team body and money is spent on sports.

“This year, we will have 20 specialised sports schools and the government of India will pump in about Rs 7-10 crore each. The idea is to have a very pointed approach so that each school will have only two or three main sports. They will be very focussed,” he said.
